

Streamlined, Supercharged '41 Model Of Kentuckian Starts Rolling Off Press

Many 'Firsts,'
Claimed For Book
By Editor Ewing

By ALLENBY E. WINER
Editor Sam Ewing's 1941 model of the Kentuckian, streamlined, supercharged and in the latest two-tone color scheme starts rolling off the belt line this week after long months of forging in the little basement workshop of McVey hall.

When pressman Harold Hartzer turns the lever on his big Kernel press the imposing 320 page yearbook, in red and black tones, will approach its final stage, that of binding. This will be done soon, according to Editor Sam.

There are a lot of "firsts," and "onlys" about this edition of the Kentuckian of which Ewing is quite proud. For instance, by approximation the book will carry over 1200 cuts of varying sizes and designs, on all phases of campus life, from eating lunch to studying physics and, of course, about graduation.

Photomontage Used

For the first time in the yearbook's history the photomontage has been used, Ewing says. His artist in this respect was Johnny Proctor, who makes a specialty of fooling around with negatives. For the sake of the layman, Ewing points out that the photomontage is the grafting of a number of negatives so that several different scenes can be shown as though appearing on the same film. This used to be done with the positive, but Proctor, says Sam, is the first one to try it with the negatives, which method is the real McCoy.

The general theme of the annual is formed around the philosophy of former president Frank L. McVey as embodied in his definition of a University.

EMOCs To Be Featured

Another "first" for Sam's yearbook is a special features section devoted to big men on the campus, or in other words the campus personalities. The book will have an index to every photo and written section, and this also sets some sort of precedent.

On the annual's title page there appears a map of Kentucky with a heart drawn in the middle, signifying Lexington and the campus as the heart of the Bluegrass. The cover of the book will be treated in somewhat similar fashion and while the editor himself was not exactly sure what it would look like, it is understood the cover will also be designed with a map of the state, the heart etcetera.

Makeup Is Different

The makeup is a drastic change from past Kentuckians and is in block form, leaving plenty of space for copy, autographs, pictures, notes and what not. Printed on one hundred-pound gloss superfine enamel paper, the lettering is in Ultra Bodoni and Baskerville, and the ink of special black and red blends. The ink color is a big departure from tradition and is the keynote of the book's appearance.

Instead of adhering to the school's Yale blue and white, Ewing and his fellow mechanics designed a new color scheme of red and black, with the various shades in between these. Book In Five Sections

There are five special sections to the annual. First comes the executive section. Following are pages devoted to features, the colleges, activities, and finally the Greeks, or to prevent confusion, the fraternities and sororities.

The sports section has been handled by tow-headed Fred Hill, publicity squire of the athletic department.

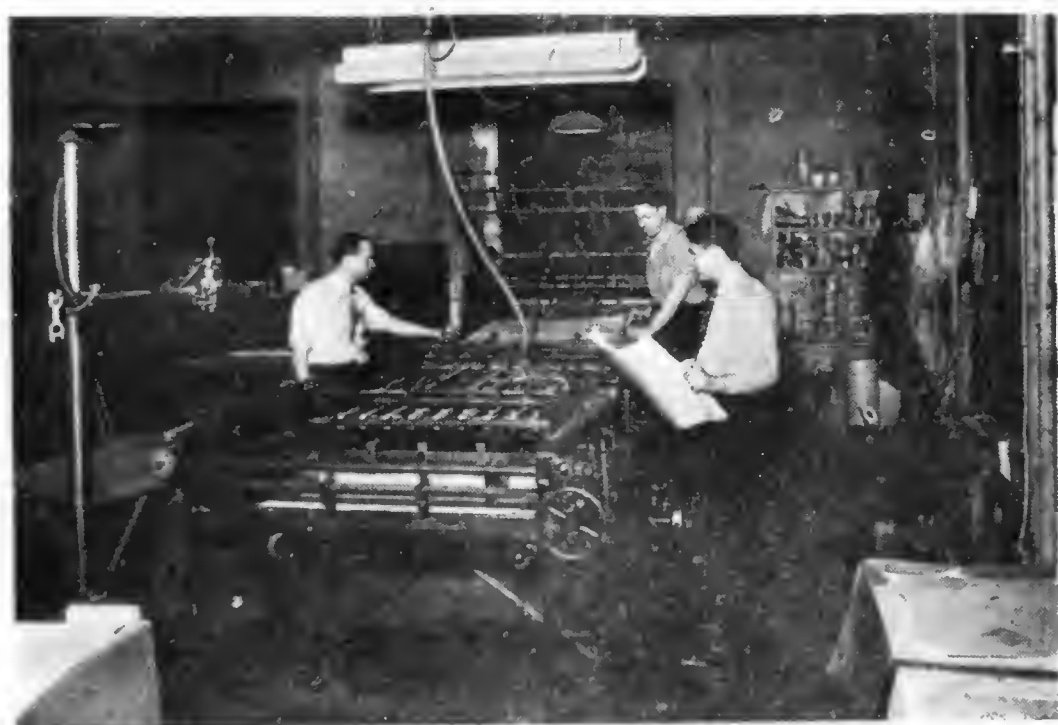

Ewing's best, he says, has been about the staff around those parts of McVey hall for many years, and the amiable editor holds high praise for his numerous lieutenants. Under the direction of Managing Editor Bill Bruckhart, Associate Editor Bill Johnson, and the photo side of the yearbook, Associate Editor Miriam Krayer supervised the mounting; and Gaines Seabree handled the assembling task.

Royalty Displayed

The beauty queens and the charm kings got their pictures prominently displayed. Queen of all the beauty is Virginia Smith. Her attendants are Mattie Palmer, Julia Johnson, Jeanne Thiel, and Anna Ruth Burton. The man with the perfect profile etcetera is athletic Lee Huber who cavorts about the hardwood for Adolph Rupp and the Wildcat basketballers.

Though it may or may not be of any interest, the completed volume will weigh close to four pounds, which makes it pretty heavy reading for anybody.

After months spent in shaping the yearbook, Editor Ewing's of-

Editor Sam Ewing confers with Don Grote, in charge of makeup, and pressman Harold Hartzer as the initial pages of the 1941 Kentuckian are placed on the press.

There's a good deal more work to putting out a University yearbook than meets the eye. Evident is this shot of three staff members selecting photographs for publication—only one of the thousand and two jobs Kentuckian editors must handle annually. Left to right, the laborers are B. F. Melton, Gordon Freshman, assistant sports editor; Miriam Krayer, St. Petersburg, Fla., junior, associate editor; and Jim Johnson, Clinton junior, managing editor.

Y Will Seek Funds During Registration

Contributions for the student YMCA fund will be solicited during registration February 3 and 4, by campus Y members it was announced yesterday.

These contributions will be used to continue the YMCA's annual University program, which includes the maintenance of a student employment office, distribution of the freshman "K" book, presentation of each semester's college night dance and furtherance of religious education on the campus.

UK Coeds Enlarge Upon Gains Of Susan B. Anthony Et Al.

By PATRICIA SNIDER

Women just seemingly won't "stay put" in the limited fields that for years have been considered their social and mental level. For some reason or other they pop up in the most unexpected places.

A rummage through the files in the deans' offices brought to light some rather astonishing information. First of all, there was found that the engineering college, supposedly for men only, had to admit that one woman, Caroline Conant, Lexington, had crept through its portals to the architectural division of the civil department.

Four In Law School

That is only one woman, to be sure, but further investigation showed that four had braved the stronghold of Blackstone and made Lafayette their headquarters. These future Clarence Darrowes are Mary Barton, Falmouth; Elizabeth Gillespie, Mayslick; Barbara Moore, Frankfort; and Helen Stephenson, Hopkinsville.

A swift glance through the files of the arts and sciences college added 12 to the number, or bring the total to 17. Pre-medical courses were most favored, having six women with industrial chemistry running second with only three.

These latter nine girls have come from as far north as New York and as far south as Louisiana and Mexico. Pre-medics are Dolores Thompson, Lexington; Opal Skages, Ashland; Marjorie Sims, Eastport, La.; Harriet Hord, Maysville; Norma Dury, Elmhurst, L. I.; and Neola Jean Baiton, Erlanger.

Chemists Listed

Industrial chemistry majors are Elsie I. March, Van Hornesville, N. Y.; Jennie C. Puckett, Indianapolis, Ind.; and Joyce Rogers, Mexico City.

Mex. Just plain chemistry, with no "Industrial" attached, attracted Sarah Frances Edmunds from St. Matthews.

Following in the footsteps of her father, Dr. Otto Kopplius of the physics department, Martha Kopplius, Lexington, has chosen physics as her major field, and plans to work with magnets, currents, and mathematical solutions.

Another Lexingtonian

Mary Wredeman, has broken ranks to take her place in the anatomy and physiology field. She thinks that research work along that line will be the best she could hope for in the way of a career.

K BOOK STAFF IS COMPLETED

K-book editors, Isabel Peacher and Bill Penick, have enlarged their staff to include art, sports, activity, YWCA, arts, and make-up editors and two advisors, while business managers, Jeannette Graves and John Long have increased their staff by two members.

The complete staff, as chosen last week, include Alinee Murray, art editor; B. F. Melton, sports; Mary Rion activity editor; Dorothy Paul, YWCA editor; Mary Olive Davis, art editor; Paul Cohen, make-up; Joe Baldwin and Ruth Wheat, business assistants.

Prof. Victor R. Portmann and Prof. C. Raymond Barnhart have been chosen as advisors. Material for freshman handbook has already been outlined and plans have been made to complete the book by June 1.

UNIVERSITY CLUB WILL ENTERTAIN STATE AUTHORS

Dinner To Be Held
February 27
In Union Building

Kentucky authors will be honored by a University club dinner Thursday February 27, in the Union building.

University faculty members included on the invitation list are Dr. T. D. Clark, Prof. Grant C. Knight, Dr. Hobart R. Lind, and Dr. Frank L. McVey, president emeritus of the University.

Authors Listed

Other Kentucky authors to be present at the dinner are William H. Townsend, Charles S. Apics, Mrs. W. T. Lafferty, J. Winston Coleman, Jr., Dr. Jesse Hermann, Joe Jordan, George Graves, Mrs. Lawrence Simpson, John Jacob Niles, Mrs. Ruth Combs, Mrs. J. B. Miner, Mrs. Lucile Stillwell Williams, Dr. F. G. Davenport, John Wilson Townsend, the Rev. Ward Russell, and Col. Samuel M. Wilson.

Er. W. E. Davis, North Middletown; Mrs. Lucy Furman, Frankfort; Mrs. Rachel Varble, Fort Mitchell; Dr. W. R. Johnson, Frankfort; Mrs. Ann Steward, Bullington; Mrs. Jean Thomas, Ashland; Mrs. Isabel McLennan McKeekin, Mrs. Dorothy Park Clark, Mrs. Attwood Martin, Louisville; and A. M. Stickle, Bowling Green.

ALL-AMERICAN MUSIC AUDITIONS WILL BE HELD

Youth Orchestra
To Make Tour
With Stokowski

Preliminary auditions for Leopold Stokowski's orchestra will be held Thursday, February 20, in the Music room of the University of Louisville. It was announced yesterday by Robert K. Salyers, state youth administrator.

Inquiries concerning application blanks should be addressed to the National Youth Administration, 301 West Main street, Louisville, Mr. Salyers said.

Stokowski To Audit

Conductor Stokowski will make a nation-wide tour starting March 4 from Hollywood to conduct final auditions in which he will select the 100 members of the new orchestra.

The "musical ambassadors" will make a tour of cities in Canada, Mexico, and the United States, starting in May. Rehearsals of the new orchestra are expected to begin early in that month.

Union Wages Offered

Those accepted for the orchestra will be paid union rates, as in last year's tour. Mr. Stokowski will be responsible for all arrangements and expenses incidental to the tour itself.

Contestants from the University last year were Sam Rainey, trumpet; John McFarland, French horn; Perry Adams, oboe; and James Trice, bassoon.

The Eyes Have It

Prof. C. A. Lampert, head of the music department, walked into his office in one of the forward wings of the old Art center on Euclid avenue Thursday afternoon.

He sat down at his desk, leaned back in his chair, stretched, and glanced out of his window before beginning his afternoon's work.

In a window of the opposite art center wing he saw a woman staring at him—not a beautiful woman but a demure, aristocratic woman whose clear blue eyes never blinked in their stare.

Prof. Lampert let his eyes fall and turned back to his desk. He began looking over some papers but that woman's stare worried him.

Through the corner of his eye he stole another glance out of his window. He turned back to his desk quickly. The woman still stared at him.

This went on for a few more minutes until the music department head became so nervous that he left his desk, brushed past his office door, walked briskly down the hall and into the other wing to see who this strange woman was.

There she was—a life-size oil painting which the Guignol theater property staff had brought into their room for possible use in "Kind Lady," Third Guignol production which opens Monday night.

KENT ADVISES 121 GRADUATES TO 'HAVE FAITH'

Speaker Warns
Of Reliance
On Education

Faith in one's self and confidence in intelligent cooperation of others are the best rules of living in present conditions, Dr. Raymond A. Kent, president of the University of Louisville, told the 121 members of the mid-year graduation class at yesterday afternoon's commencement exercises.

In facing the crises or economic conditions and the enigma of the future, graduates were advised not to lean too heavily on education as their advantage. Whole civilizations have fallen because of this reliance on institutions, the speaker said.

The personal factor of the natural intelligence and resourcefulness is the most important asset to human beings, Dr. Kent continued in explaining that education could improve it but could not manufacture it.

At the baccalaureate service Sunday afternoon in Memorial Hall, Dr. Jesse Hermann, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, told the graduates that a reverence of the eternal is the beginning of wisdom.

The following degrees were conferred:

College of Arts and Sciences
Degree of bachelor of arts—Edwin Joseph David, Louisville; Arthur Johnston Dotson, Pikeville; Peter Alexander Gragis, Great Neck, N. Y.; Minta Anne Hockaday, Lexington; Nancye Lister Kidwell, Maysville; Charles Allen Larnard Jr., Lexington; John Bell Lovett, Sparkill, N. Y.; John Moody McFarland, Lexington; Jean Rucker Mahan, Lexington; Jack Maxwell Ramos, Lexington; Anita Elizabeth Ware, Lexington.

Degree of bachelor of science—Harry Clayton Denham, Vanceburg; Arthur Henry Drucker, New York, N. Y.; Marguerite Geneva Ford, Lexington; Buckner Woodford Hamilton, Lexington; Geneva May Smith, Danville; Norman Wilhoit Staker, Lamesa, Texas; William Harris White, Montgomery, Ala.; Charles Byrd Williams, Salyersville.

Degree of bachelor of science in industrial chemistry—Harold Clinton Schuyler, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Degree of bachelor of arts in journalism—Jane Saunders Day, Maysville.

Degree of bachelor of science in medical technology—Horace Edward Dean, Lexington; Robert Arthur Ritten, Newport.

College of Agriculture

Degree of bachelor of science in agriculture—Everett J. Beers, Jr., Lexington; Jean Hart Blain, Dry Ridge; Harry Moorman Boyd, Paducah; Henry Elmus Branton Jr., Hazel; Omer A. Bryant, Liberty; Terry Lee Campbell, Water Valley; Daniel Johnson Culton, Parksville; Tavnor Dunlap, Jr., Versailles; C. L. Elmore, Cleveland, Tenn.; Franklin Marx Foster, Nicholasville; Charles Emmett Griffy, Lawrenceburg; Kelly Cunningham Haley, Paris; Robert Wilson Henman, Lexington; Maurice Everett Humphrey, Lexington; Lawrence Landis, New York, N. Y.; Louis William Marker, Louisville; Arnold Jay Meade, Paintsville; Orville Wright Meade, Winchester; Frank Allen Rogers, Jr., Winchester; Edward Newton Royster, Henderson; William Alvie Stapleton, Fugate.

The degree of bachelor of science in home economics—Margaret Ellen Smith, Danville.

College of Engineering

Degree of bachelor of science in civil engineering—William Granville Coblin, Frankfort; Edward Rex Collingsworth, Jackson; Paul Adolph Johnson, Youngstown, Ohio; John Frederick Johnston, Wilmington, Del.; Raymond Wallace Pember, Louisville.

Survivors to Draw Up New Battle Lines

30 NOMINATED
FOR SPONSORS OF ROTC UNITS

Selections Slated
For February 10, 11,
Ball, February 22

Thirty coeds have been nominated to vie for the 13 honorary ROTC sponsorships, according to an announcement from the military department.

Sorority candidates are June Mehne, Mary Lewis Boaz, and Betty Mitchell, Alpha Gamma Delta; Ruby Jo Gevedon, Marla Willing, and Phyllis Gerald, Alpha Xi Delta; Mary Agnes Gabbard, Annetta Creuch, and Marjorie Wheelon, Delta Zeta; Jean Elliott, Betty Ann Raiker, and Julia Johnson, Delta Delta Delta.

Jane Baynham, Margaret Trent, and Mary Duncan, Kappa Kappa Gamma; Caroline Conant, Anna Ruth Burton, and Dorothy Lair, Chi Omega; Pat Pennebaker, Mary Lee Brockman, and Louise Ewan, Kappa Delta; and Sara Fisher, Miriam Krayer, and Lavenia Warner, Zeta Tau Alpha.

Independent candidates include Mattie Palmer, Jean Marie McConnell, Peggy Denny, Josephine Baldauf, Rita Sue Lassie, and Lida Stoll.

Students To Pick Sponsors

Members of the advanced military science courses will elect the 13 sponsors on February 10 and 11. Nine of these will be honorary captains of the companies, three honorary lieutenant colonels of the battalions, and one honorary colonel of the regiment.

The colonel and lieutenant colonels will be selected from the sponsors by a committee February 19 in Alumni hall.

Sponsors Ineligible

Lieut. Col. Howard Donnelly, head of the military department, said that the sponsors of the band and Pershing Rifles are ineligible for this election. They will be designated as staff sponsors on the staff of the honorary colonel.

The sponsor selected as honorary colonel will be appointed sponsor of Seaboard and Blade, honorary military fraternity, and will be designated as queen of the Military Ball on February 22.

CAA TRAINING FOR UK REFUSED

Regional Office
Turns Down Bid

There will be no CAA for University students this semester, it was announced by Acting President Thomas P. Cooper after receipt of a letter from the superintendent of the regional CAA office at Chicago recently.

Although the University "is disappointed," Dr. Cooper said, plans would continue to go forward in an effort to produce the course here.

No explanation of the refusal was made by Charles E. Cox, regional superintendent.

At a meeting Thursday of the Lexington Board of Commerce it was announced that Congressman Virgil Chapman was making every effort to secure approval of the application as quickly as possible.

Ed Wilder, executive secretary of the board declared that the petition had been filed with the CAA in November, asking for federal aid to finance a flying course for 20 students. He also called attention to the fact that 212 persons had already registered as candidates for training.

Mr. Chapman's reply stated that he was maintaining an active interest in the petition and that he had sent a message to the Chicago office asking for details concerning the situation.

Potter Will Speak

Prof. M. E. Potter, head of the physical education department, will discuss "A Program of Recreation for Every School Child" at a dinner meeting of the University Training School Parent Teachers' association at 6 p. m., today, in the Training School cafeteria.

Yesterday Professor Potter spoke in the significance of Physical Fitness in the National Defense Program at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Lexington Co-Operative club in the Lafayette hotel.

Students Will Try To Recoup Losses Of Fall Campaign

Somewhat recuperated but still mentally bedraggled from last week's Battle of Knowledge, over 3700 student survivors returned to the firing line today for a two-day skirmish in Alumni gymnasium.

Approximately 80 freshman and transfer students, who will serve as reinforcements in the student ranks, took classification tests and physical examinations yesterday. The recruits are not expected to fill in completely the gaps created by academic casualties and diploma-tic retreats.

Activities of the two-day encounter will consist mainly of strategic movement for positions in preparation for another blitzkrieg four months hence. Companies M through O opened registration and classification skirmishing at 8 o'clock this morning.

Other companies are scheduled to move to the front according to the following schedule:

9:00 to 9:50—P through R
10:00 to 10:50—S
11:00 to 11:50—T through Z

This Afternoon

1:30 to 2:20—A through B
2:30 to 3:30—C through D
3:30 to 4:20—Miscellaneous
M through Z and A through D

Wednesday Morning

8:00 to 8:50—E through G
9:00 to 9:50—H through J
10:00 to 10:50—K through L
11:00 to 11:50—Miscellaneous
A through Z

Wednesday Afternoon

1:30 to 4:30—Miscellaneous
A through Z

The four-months period of training in knowledge and classroom tactics will open at 8 a. m. Thursday, Monday, February 17, has been set as the final date on which a student may enter organized class training.

CATS BEAT TIDE IN TUSCALOOSA BY 38-36 SCORE

Kentucky Quintet
Takes Early Lead,
Stays In Front

After holding an eight point lead with three minutes to go, Kentucky's Wildcats barely managed to stave off a desperate Alabama rally and eke out a 38-36 decision over the Crimson Tide before a capacity crowd at Tuscaloosa last night.

The Cats were literally "saved by the gun" when Seals of the Tide connected with a wild fling at the round of the gun. However, officials ruled that the game had ended split seconds before the Alabamian made the shot.

The game was, for the most part, a slow affair until both teams began setting a terrific pace in the closing minutes.

The Crimson Tide jumped into a quick 4-0 lead when Adair marked up two foul tosses and a field goal. After five minutes of playing time the score stood 3-4 for Alabama with Mel Brewer having credit for all of the Wildcat's tallies.

After several minutes of scoreless battling, Brewer's pivot shot sent the Cats into the lead for the remainder of the half. The Cats maintained a five-point advantage throughout most of the rest of the period, but a free toss by Roth just before the half ended cut the Cats' lead to 17-13 at intermission.

Kentucky ran the score up to 21-14 before Roth could score on the gratis toss for the Tide. After Adair had dropped in a two-point for Alabama, White steatocated the net for four points at 25-17.

Huber and Brewer then sandwiched in field goals between Red Elephant scores to increase the count to 29-22. Kentucky bested its opponent by dropping in three free tosses to two before White swished the strings for a goal. Alabama made five points, and Allen dribbled under for two points, the score being Kentucky 38, Alabama 29. King added a gratis toss.

The Tide surged within three points of the Cats before King was fouled and dropped in Kentucky's last point. With the score standing at 38-24 and with the Cats freezing the ball, Finney got the ball clipped in a two-punter and the gun sounded a fraction of a minute before Seals dropped in the not-to-be-counted goal. The score stood at Kentucky 38, Alabama 26.

Grounded For At Least Another Semester

It was with regret that we read the other day of the impossibility of UK's securing a civilian pilots training course during the current school year. Campus surveys had revealed an overwhelming approval on the part of the students, and a number of undergraduate organizations had urged the adoption of a CAA program with a more than incidental enthusiasm.

We need not repeat the advantages such a course would offer the students, or the important role it would have in the University's share of the national defense program. These things have been gone over many times before.

We can only thank Doctor Cooper for the efforts he has made to secure the CAA for the campus, and urge that he do all possible to bring the program here by the fall semester.

To the students there is little that can be said except to mutter the old platitude about it being better late than never.

After All, Savannah Was Merely 'The Dunkirk Of 1864'

We are informed that our recent editorial on the collegian's place in the New South has not been well received in certain quarters. Some people, it seems, do not relish the thought of giving up the self-conscious attitude which descended on Dixie about the same time W. Tecumseh Sherman pulled out; a self-consciousness which we Southerners have kept alive now for some three quarters of a century, despite all our better instincts and rational views.

For example, one good lady of the Lost Cause has even gone to the trouble of clipping the editorial, penciling in answers to the interrogative paragraphs, and sending the whole thing back in evident high dudgeon.

We quote the paragraphs mentioned:

"If anything is ever to be done about (these Ku Klux Klan-like practices), it will be up to university men and women to plan and carry the work through." Our correspondent has here written God forbid.

"What attitude, for example, are we going to assume toward lynching parties? Are we going to continue to rationalize them by saying to ourselves, 'what of it—after all he was only a nigger?'" Here the lady has penciled Yes.

"What stand are we going to take upon the question of poll taxes? Are we going to adhere to the traditional practice of 'maintaining democracy' by preventing 10 per cent of the Negroes and 'poor white trash' from voting—simply because they are who they are?" Again the answer is Yes.

"Will we continue to oppose the rights of organized labor when these rights are now guaranteed by the Federal Government itself?" And still again a bold Yes.

"... In a few weeks we Southerners are going to be shocked to hear a song, played by Count Basie's orchestra, whose lyrics sarcastically say: 'It's the same old South, where the blood hounds that chased poor Eliza chase a CIO organizer. Let the northerners keep their Niagara; we'll keep our southern pellegra.' The lady has countered with: It is better than carpet-baggers.

And—apparently as a final touch—there is added: He who likes not the South, let him go North.

All of which only adds proof to the sad hypothesis that, although the old Klan is dead in name, its spirit and "ideals" still manage somehow to cling on. And the critics of the South are given just that much more food for criticism.

Opportunity to Prove That 'Charity Begins at Home'

As long as there are people, and as long as some of these people are denied what most of us habitually refer to as "the breaks," there will be need for charities.

Under our current order of society there are two possible methods by which charities may be provided for. The first is that, by means of higher taxes than would be collected ordinarily, the individual cities and counties of the United States care for all charity needs. The second is that the raising of the major portion of charity money be regarded as a private undertaking.

Because it is voluntary and private rather than compulsory and public—because, in short, they regard it as the "American Way"—the people of the United States have chosen the second method. In recent years they have brought most of the separate charities together under one agency, which they call the Community Chest.

They figure that in so doing they can guarantee more efficiency and more all-around convenience, and can secure, as a result, larger appropriations than would be otherwise possible.

This week and next have been designated by the citizens of Lexington as the period over which their annual Community Chest drive will be conducted. Since faculty members and students of the University are citizens of this city for nine months at least out of each year, it is only just that they contribute their proportional shares to the Community Chest fund.

Committees are being organized, this week on the campus to conduct the drive at UK. When these groups approach you or your organization for contributions, we urge that you give them your support.

For if there was ever a time in the history of the nation when the "American Way" need be defended, that time is the present.

Saroyan's Book Is The Greatest Ever Written—According To Saroyan

BEHIND THE WALLS BY ALFRED E. WISER

What became of Genk, The Killer and Skull is not known. Maybe they're in jail like once before for swimming in the public park duckpond by moonlight. Genk's Grandpa called him the worst orphan in the history of the family all the way back to Latvia or some place. The Killer was hated genuinely by all cats because he hung them by their tails and threw some of them into the river. When he didn't chase cats he flew kites and read cheap books. Skull was an intellectual, and always did his homework, though Genk swore that Grandpa did the brain work for him half the time.

These were cronies of mine in the early days when Babe Ruth was every kids hero, even more than George Washington. They were the most mischievous bunch in the neighborhood. One day Genk, who was eleven, and The Killer, who was ten, and Genk's Grandpa—who was eighty—went fishing in Clover creek about ten miles from Genk's home. They took along fat cheese sandwiches and raw eggs. Grandpa an eggs when The Killer wasn't throwing them at him. That day The Killer got out of hand and challenged Grandpa to wrestle and rolled him down the bank over the moss and into the mud, where Grandpa stuck for a couple hours until Genk dug him out. Grandpa beat up Genk for it, and The Killer laughed.

Even Skull could spark a lot of trouble when he wanted to stop being a philosopher at the age of ten. Once he made a persuasive oration to The Killer, Genk, Bep and me about the goodness in swimming in the park pond. We climbed over the fence at night, took off our clothes and dumped into the water, disturbing the sleep of a family of ducks, who quacked their complaint to a city officer.

He dragged us out into the moonlight and lectured to us on the wrath of the taxpayers over such oninous doings. Then he dragged us to jail. Judge Croak said we ought to be put in irons or something and said if we were his kids he'd whack us. Skull wouldn't let us tell our names so we got put in a cell overnight and in the morning Grandpa limped in to take us home and told Croak to leave the whacking to him.

Genk and The Killer and Grandpa and Bep, who was ten and Genk's brother, were people such as William Saroyan writes about in that easily misunderstood book of his, "My Name Is Aram." Saroyan tells about Uncle Melik and Aram and Mr. Strangford the strongman; cousins Arak and Mourad etc. Maybe a lot of people won't like the book and maybe they're right. (Saroyan thinks it's the best book ever written.) A lot say it is a kid's book.

Well, it is and it isn't, because there is a lot of good philosophy spun between those lines which you may not recognize. We like it because it reminded us of fellows like Genk, The Killer, Skull, and Grandpa, who resemble closely Arak, and Aram and Melik and Gyko and the "poor and burning Arab."

The stories remind us of similar incidents in our own "way back when" days. Maybe it's not worth the money you'll have to pay for it, but My Name Is Aram is certainly worth your time, especially if you have a memoir.

The 'Aid Short Of War' Policy

MUSICAL MUTTERINGS

By BILL PENICK

Once upon a time there was a young man who thought he might like to play the drums in a swing band. This young man, called Gene Krupa by those who knew him, had started to be a priest at St. Joseph's College in Indiana. But one day he went up to Chicago, his home town and was asked to play drums for one of his friends, a bandleader whose regular hide-man was ill at the time. Gene was very obliging and he's been playing ever since.

After several years of learning the fundamentals and jamming around Chicago with Benny Goodman, Bud Freeman, Jess Stacy and several other Chicago jazzmen, Gene was called in by Goodman to play in the rhythm section of his newly organized band.

Most every swing fan is familiar with the story of the success of Goodman's band. This was the crew that really brought swing music into the limelight and no small part of its popularity was due to the drum antics of Krupa. The band's recording of Sing, Sing, Sing became a byword whenever swing records were discussed. In our opinion the success of that record and many of the other old Goodman favorites lies with Krupa's drumming.

GENE KRUPA

Good drumming alone was not enough.

About two years ago Gene decided that he was ready to go out on his own and he started his own band. Most everybody figured that the new band would just be a group of musicians to sit around and watch Gene play the drums. After all he was recognized as the greatest drummer of that time and some said for all time. (We find ourselves forced to state, however, that we don't believe there ever has been a drummer who could touch the late Chick Webb.)

For the first few months of its life Krupa's new group was little more than a front for Gene's drumsticks. Then Gene gradually got wise to the situation and found that he would have to organize a swing band or some kind of a band if he expected to get anywhere in the already overcrowded mediocre class of the band world.

After some time spent in acquiring new men and changing the style somewhat the Gene Krupa band started getting better press notices, crowds began improving, and the public realized that this was a plenty solid group of musicians.

We think this band is still coming up. Krupa's latest recordings will take a back seat to nobody's. For example hear Gene's waxing of Washington and Lee Swing. A fine arrangement and a sax section that really has drive. On the other hand, his The Sergeant Was Shy features a fine trumpet section led by Corky Cornelius plus some flashy drum work by the leader. What might quite easily be called a drum record is the ace skin artist's theme song, Apurkody backed by Jungle Madness.

Apurkody, a Krupa original, and its plattermate show Krupa at his best, on the tom-toms. Then in line with his new idea of letting the whole band take it his latest recordings of Who and Full Dress feature the trumpet section again and some really solid piano work by Tony D'Amore.

Reader Attacks Pawn Shops For Gypping Students

To the Editor of the Kernel:

If honor were rendered where honor is due, the humanistic, altruistic members of the Student Legislature who have so generously backed the Loan bill would wear the laurel. With no thought of personal gain or glory, they seek to aid indigent ambition for learning.

But why would their efforts be limited. Why not further aid the students who need money by giving them aid now secured at exorbitant rates in the city? Many students shun "loans" for obvious reasons. But they will and do pawn their more or less valuables.

In the city at pawn shops the rates are robbery pure and simple. The lecherous "business men" take advantage of need for clothes, lodging, even food, and exact high interest with an air of condescension. "Well, don't take it, ma fran. Jus' because it's you. I giff you dollar twenty-five..."—on an article worth from $10 to $25.

Now President Allen is too busy to operate a student shop but it could be done. The security is sufficient so there could be no loss—the profit can be enough to cover costs or slightly over, and the students will be saved embarrassment and insult forced on them by dire necessity.

We are glad to see a spurt of helpfulness toward one's brother invade government, and feel this is an answer to bigots and pigs who point a self-righteous finger at us and cry: "Immoral, hard! Isn't it wonderful!"

Gee Gee.

World Watches U.S.'s Debate

WORLD'S WEEK By JIM WOOLDRIDGE

Washington news kept the world's press wires hot this week as ground was broken for debate on the lend-lease bill, a measure designed to give the President broad powers for sending war materials to Britain on loose credit terms.

The bill was introduced in the House shortly after the present session began in January. It was referred to the House foreign affairs committee which concluded its investigations of the measure last week with some famous hearings.

Most evasive witness at the hearings was the former ambassador to England, Joseph P. Kennedy. Though he took no definite stand, his general idea was that the bill should empower the President to do the job but that Congress should not lose all the control.

Colonel Charles Lindbergh walked into the packed and gaping committee room and took his seat to make his first public testimony since the Hauptmann trial. Said the tall grave aviator, speaking slowly with conviction and poise, "I believe we have encouraged a war in which Britain is not going to succeed." And when a nervous Tennessee congressman asked Lindbergh who he wanted to win the war, the colonel replied, "I prefer to see neither side win. I prefer a negotiated peace."

General Hugh Johnson, anti-Roosevelt columnist, and Norman Thomas, socialist party leader, told the committee that the bill gave too much power to the President. Thomas called Winston Churchill "an Imperialist."

During the hearing William S. Bullitt, ambassador to France, said that the present state of mind in this country was similar to that of France a year ago. The American people, he explained, think that the Atlantic ocean is then Maginot Line.

That England is bringing plenty of pressure to secure early passage of the bill was evident when the new British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, arrived in Washington after sailing the Atlantic under forced draft on a new British battleship.

President Roosevelt sped down the Potomac in his private yacht to meet the envoy and talked to him all the way back to the capital.

Lord Halifax visited the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs committee last week to see if the new aid bill could be pushed. He was told the measure should be on the House floor this week and should be passed with little opposition.

The administration has made every effort to stifle opposition before the bill gets to the floor debate. President Roosevelt called the key congressional leaders to his office to explain the bill which gives him almost complete freedom to aid England in any way.

After the President's talk, a few congressmen objected that the legislation should be in force for only two years and that there should be an understanding that American naval vessels should not convey British merchant ships across the Atlantic.

Since the President agreed to these restrictions and the committee added them to the bill as amendments, the measure should see little opposition from isolationist representatives. Washington observers predicted.

You have to go to bed at 10 p.m. in Rumania these days. You have to stay at home most of the time, too, because they don't allow any public gatherings.

General Ion Antonescu, premier of the Little Balkan nation which has seen more trouble than any country in the world during the last year, proclaimed these laws to suppress a revolt which raged there last week.

It all began when an Iron Guardist, a militant political party member, shot a representative of the German general staff. The Rumanian premier had to banish the Guardist, of course, because Rumanian borders are at present filled with German troops which have agreed to protect the country against Russia.

So Premier Antonescu imprisoned the assassin, kicked all the Iron Guardists off the police force, and fired a prominent Guardist from his cabinet.

Then the entire Iron Guard party revolted. Some of them barricaded themselves in a church and shot at native army troops. Others ruined army tanks with wire traps. Another group began terrorizing the radio programs and spreading propaganda leaflets.

Communications to Rumania were shut off for four days and then Antonescu released a communique which said the revolt had been conquered.

Antonescu is an Iron Guardist himself but he only joined to get to the premiership.

Hear these numbers and we think you'll agree that Gene has proved himself a fine musician as well as a top-notch showman on the drums.

With lease-lend, aid and no-aid, bottleneck and ASCAP troubles brewing everywhere, the time seems about right to start a campaign to have the national anthem changed to "Stars and Stripes Forever."

And poor old Jeannie has been overworked so much lately her you-know-what-kind-of-hair is turning gray.

Disillusion department: When Doctor Yates, discussing old English ballads, asked if anyone in the class was familiar with "Barbara Allen," the boy in the back of the room did not make a wise-crack.

According to the sports pages, it won't be long before slugger Hank Greenburg is drafted into the army. We wouldn't like to be on the other side of the trenches when Pvt. Greenburg begins swinging a rifle.

This probably doesn't have any great international significance, but nevertheless German's minister to Rumania has the soothing name of Baron Manfred von Killinger.

Add appropriate names: Western's six foot six inch All-American center is named Towery.

Readers Digest tells about the former Waldorf Astoria chef who has taken over the food problem at the Chicago city jail. However, he so far has refrained from calling the main dish "pain et leay prisonnier."

CURIE TO SPEAK AT HENRY CLAY THURSDAY NIGHT

French Author
Will Describe
German Conquest

Five Curie, daughter of the discoverer of radium, will speak on "The Spirit of Resistance" at the Henry Clay high school auditorium at 8 o'clock Thursday night under the auspices of the Lexington Public Forum.

Journalist and author, Mlle. Curie is now in the United States for her third lecture tour of the country. She served during the early part of the present war as president of the Women's Volunteer Corps in France. In England, where she fled after the surrender of the Petain government to the Germans, she had been editor of the French paper, France, which was circulated among French emigres in England.

Her lecture will deal with some of the scenes she witnessed during the last days of the French republic and in England during air bombardments. Coming to this country from the war zones, Mlle. Curie told interviewers that German domination in France was becoming unbearable.

4000 ATTEND FARM, HOME CONVENTION HERE

Attendance Record
Is Set At 'Most Successful' Meet

Prevention of inflation and aid for Britain are America's two big jobs for 1941, Dr. Frank L. McVey, president emeritus of the University, told the Farm and Home convention at its final meeting Friday afternoon.

The convention, which lasted from Tuesday January 28 through Friday January 31 and attracted the largest number of Kentucky agriculture workers in the history of the meetings, was termed by Acting President Thomas P. Cooper "most successful" in attendance and accomplishments. Approximately 4,000 persons registered.

Predicts Price Control
In his prediction for 1941, Dr. McVey said efforts would be made to control prices—prevent inflation—but he was not sure of the outcome.

Dr. McVey said he favored helping Britain "quickly and efficiently." He said he did not think the citizenship of this country wanted a war at this time, but he saw a movement toward war and he feared some incident might put the United States into the war.

Business will be good this year, Dr. McVey said, due to increased industrial activity as a result of the armament program. For farmers, however, he thought it might not be as good as last year. It would be a big year, he said, "but not an easy year; rather a hard and difficult year."

The meeting, the 29th annual session, attracted field agents, farmers and homemakers from all over the state and speakers from New York, Washington, D. C., Kentucky and surrounding states.

Visitors saw exhibits of tobacco and machinery, and were entertained with banquets, luncheons, and a style show supervised by Miss Nova Eisner, fashion director of the Cotton Textiles Institute, New York. The styles were modeled by University students.

Coopers Entertain At Tea For Graduating Students

Acting President and Mrs. Thomas P. Cooper entertained the members of the graduating class with a tea in the Music room of the Union building Monday afternoon immediately following the graduation exercises.

Members of the faculty who were invited to assist were Dr. and Mrs. Frank L. McVey, Dean and Mrs. P. P. Boyd, Dean and Mrs. W. S. Taylor, Dean and Mrs. W. D. Funkhouser, Colonel and Mrs. J. H. Graham, Dean and Mrs. Edward West, Dean A. E. Evans, Dean and Mrs. T. T. Jones, Dean and Mrs. L. J. Horlacher, Dean and Mrs. W. E. Freeman, Dr. and Mrs. W. D. Valleau, Dr. and Mrs. Amy Vandenberg, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Chamberlain, Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Bigge, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Morton, Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Peak, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Melcher, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Gillis.

Students who assisted were Catherine Cooper, Minta Ann Hockaday, Anita Ware, Marguerite Ford, Janie Day, Eleanor Howard, Margaret E. Smith, Mary Sheehan, Betty Artz, Helen Markwell, Jean Mahan, Mary Rose Crook, Inez Connely, Geraldine Wesley, Marvin Tinscher, John Lovett, Robert Ritter, Daniel Culton, Fred Fischer, Thomas Carhart, Robert Stutz, J. Klock-King Wedding Solemnized

The wedding of Adalide Christman Klock, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Rochester, N. Y., to John Gilbert King Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. King of Lexington, was solemnized at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at St. Petersburg.

The Rev. Evan A. Edwards performed the ceremony, which was held at St. Peter's Episcopal Church and was attended by the immediate families and close friends of the couple. Mr. Thomas R. Griffith gave the bride a ring.

For her wedding the bride chose a frock of gold crepe, with self applique on shoulders and pockets as the only trimming. Her smart brown veiled hat was trimmed with a small bouquet of flowers and feathers; her accessories were brown, and her shoulder bouquet was of orchids.

Mrs. William Bond was matron of honor, and Mr. John G. King served as best man for his son.

Immediately after the ceremony Mrs. Klock, mother of the bride, entertained the wedding party and immediate families at an informal reception at the Yacht Club.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. King left for a wedding trip after which they will come to Lexington to make their home.

The bride was graduated from the Rochester schools and St. Petersburg Junior College, and the University, where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

JOHNNY LEWIS

Johnny Lewis Will Play For Alpha Gam Formal

Dance Planned
For Saturday Night
In Union Ballroom

Epsilon chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta will entertain with a starlight formal dance February 8 in the Bluegrass room of the Student Union building.

Johnny Lewis and his orchestra is scheduled to play for the first formal of the year. Lewis and his orchestra have had long engagements at the Netherland Plaza hotel, Hotel Gibson, and Castle Farm in Cincinnati. They have also played at the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans, Hotel Dennis in Atlantic City and many other popular resorts throughout the country. The orchestra has also broadcast over National, Columbia, and Mutual Broadcasting systems.

Johnny Lewis' orchestra is the only orchestra to ever play two successful engagements at the Netherland Plaza in one season.

Helen Taylor is the general chairman for the dance. The decoration committee is composed of Betty Mitchell, Barbara Rehm, Aimee Murray, Helen Cary Blackburn, and Alice Codell.

Author Of First
U. S. Folk Opera
Enrolled Here

BY RUSH BROOKE

Enrolled at the University this semester is Harrison Elliot, of Bessey Lane, Ky., Kentucky mountain product who authored America's first folk opera, "The Call of the Cumberland", which was broadcast several years ago as a coast-to-coast feature of the National Broadcasting Company.

The Kentucky composer and school teacher, writer of numerous songs and ballads, is a senior in the College of Education. While attending the University in 1932-33, he was a member of the band and men's glee club. He composed several marches and songs which were featured by the University vocal and instrument groups. Among his operas were "Kappa Delta Girl of Mine" and "U of K Homecoming".

Sang Lead Himself
In 1935 he was asked to produce his mountain opera over the NBC hookup, and did so, singing the lead himself in the one-hour production. Elliot also has sung over the Mutual and Columbia broadcasting chains.

After leaving the University in 1933, he taught for three years in mountain schools of Floyd county. Then he became director of recreation for the Works Progress administration in Ashland. While there he produced and directed many plays.

It has been estimated that more than 100,000 persons attended his operettas, musical comedies, square dances, and radio dramas, presented in Ashland Central park by the WPA.

Works Recorded
His works have been recorded in numerous anthologies of Kentucky music, especially of the mountain type, including Sarah Litsey's "Kentucky Poets", and "Ballad Makers" by Jean Thomas, of Kentucky folklore fame.

In his free hours and between studies, the young composer is working on a manuscript which he hopes will be completed during the coming year.

The men's gymnasium at San Diego State college holds 1,500 spectators. The college's new bowl will ultimately accommodate 45,000.

CAGE TOURNNEY TICKETS PLACED ON SALE MONDAY

Conference Meet Will Be Played In Louisville

With Kentucky's basketball champions making a near-to-home defense of their Southeastern conference title, Bernie Shively, athletic director and chairman of the conference tournament committee, predicts a strong demand for season tickets for the annual cage show to be held February 27-March 1 in Louisville's Jefferson County armory.

Season tickets, priced at $5 and good for reserved seats at each of the six sessions, were placed on sale yesterday at the athletic office. The tournament will consist of three afternoon and night sessions. Two games will be played during each of the sessions, with the exception of the final night meeting which will determine the champions. Drawings to be made.

The tournament committee, which consists of Shively, Maj. Robert Neyland of Tennessee, and Tom Zerfoss of Vanderbilt, will meet here February 23 to make the tournament drawings. It was announced yesterday.

If all 12 teams enter, as is anticipated, four byes will probably be granted on a basis of performance during the regular season.

This is the first time that the tournament has been held in Kentucky and a large number of students, Lexingtonians and Central Kentuckians are expected to turn out to give moral aid to the Cats.

General admission tickets will not be on sale until February 24. Individual duets will be available at $1 for the first two afternoon sessions and $1.25 for the night sessions and the Saturday afternoon semi-final round.

Two new overpasses mean safety for students having to cross busy Washington avenue on the University of Minnesota campus.

Running Wild

By JOHN SAMARA

We were feeling pretty low about everything in general and our basketball prospects in particular the other day when we happened to bump into our old friend Joe Gilsey, the profound prognosticator of things athletic and the optimistic hopeful of University teams.

"What's worryin' ye, lad," queried Joe, trotting out his best Irish brogue for the occasion. "What can possibly be wrong with ye on such a balmy afternoon?" (It was snowing)

"Well, Joe," we retorted, "it's that basketball team of ours. Things haven't been going so well. Here they are, our only sure-fire athletic representatives for annual honors, and what have they done? Lost to as many teams as they've beaten. A 500. batting average."

"Well, now, I reckon as how that ain't nothin' to be in a stew about," drawled UK's No. 1 rooster, changing his accent like the British after Munich. "After all, young'un, these boys are quite new at the game and they're only warmin' up to the task. Comes tournament time they'll be in there. These 're only the preliminary skirmishes, give 'em time to get into the spirit of the thing."

"But here it is the middle of the season and Coach Rupp hasn't even settled on a definite starting five. He's been juggling that lineup like a veteran vaudeville trouper with the itch."

"Well, I reckon there's a good sign rather than a bad 'un. They're just so much good material around that Adolph has been tryin' to be fair to all of 'em," retorted our sunny-outlooked friend.

"That may be so, but we still don't see any outstanding stars floating around Alumni gym, Joe. Remember the Hagans, the Oppers, the Sales and all the other basketball greats of other years. Who's going to come up to their standard this year?"

"Well, I'll tell yah," came back our multi-lingual man-of-all-answers. "This here Brewery fella ain't nobuddy's fool when it comes to basketball, and he's only a sophomore."

The name's Brewer, Joe.

"So all right, Brewer it is, and when did you ever see a guard that could toss the fish around like Cap'n Huber, and seems to me that Stieck kid ain't been doin' so bad either."

"You mean Tico? He hasn't been consistent enough. The kid may have been lucky in one or two games . . ."

"Faith, and it's luck, ye be after callin' it," roared Gilsey, sliding back into his brogue. "And what do ye think has been keeping all his shots out? The other team? Why man alive . . ."

"Okay, Joe, okay, we didn't mean it. But tell us, then, what has been keeping the team from winning?"

"It ain't nothin' you can put your finger on, Laddie, though that old demon flu hasn't been exactly unemployed around Lexington. Why even the Man in the Brown Suit has changed to a white shroud. But I wouldn't let it get me down. You can look for them Wildcats to be really clawing from now on in. As for me, I'm going down to the athletic office now and get me some tickets for that tournament in Louisville. I aim to be in on the kill when the 'Cats show them Southern fella how the game should be played."

Hey, wait a minute, Joe, get a couple for me too, will you?

Women's Sports

WAA volleyball honors go to Doris Settle, the flash player, who managed to star in every game even though spending 50 per cent of her time getting up after falling on the floor.

Settle was just one of the 32 girls who reported daily for the past three weeks to volleyball practice from 4 to 5 p. m. in the woman's gym.

Famous for advancing to "sizzler servers" from "weak pushers" were Mary Bennett, Heath Tinley, Edyth Heaton, Helen Harrison, and Tommy Logan.

"Where do I go from here?" asks "Janie" Jackson, the proverbial time-killer of the volleyball group, who never knew which way to go when rotating was due.

An orchid to "Panama" Fessler who forgot all about personal glory, and passed the ball to the front line players for a "kill" over the net.

WAA's first-team members are Eloise Rochester, Margaret Fessler, Doris Settle, Jennie Sullivan, Elizabeth Keaton, Doris Reichenbach, Martha McCauley, Julie Waters, and Dorothy Paul, as announced by the manager, Dorothy Paul, today.

Members of the second team are Sylvia Siegel, Edyth Heaton, Charlotte Sale, Heath Tinley, Gishie Bederman, Jean Williams, Willie Salmon, Tommy Logan, Agnes Smith, and Rita Leslie.

WAA basketball is scheduled to start the second week in February. A first team will be chosen and games with other colleges will be scheduled.

Oldest record recognized by the National football league is held by Paddy Driscoll, Driscoll dorp-kicked four field goals in a game with the Columbus Panhandlers.

Cage Cats Raise Loop Rating By Close Win Over Vanderbilt

Lipscombe Scores 21 Points For Commodores

Kentucky's Rupp-less Wildcats were several notches higher in the Southeastern conference standings today as the result of their narrow 51-50 shade over the Vanderbilt Commodores Saturday night at Nashville.

Playing without the masterminding of their head mentor, Adolph Rupp, the Cats raised their won-lost record within the loop to two games won, and one lost. This figure gives them a second-place tie along with Tennessee and Tulane, both of whom won four and lost two. Florida stands at the top with five victories against one setback.

The Cats were guided by Assistant Coach Paul McBrayer in Saturday night's encounter before 1,500 fans in the Tennessee capital.

Cats Lead Most of Game

Leading most of the game, the Cats faltered momentarily during the final minutes to allow the Commodores to forge ahead. However, goals by Huber, Allen, and Farnsley at opportune moments were the deciding factors of the contest.

The McBrayermen got away to a swift start, running up an 11-4 advantage in the first six minutes. Mel Brewer leading the scoring parade. However, with the score standing 19-9 in favor of the Kentuckians, Brewer asked to be taken from the ball game. Brewer had complained of feeling weak when the team reached Nashville, but felt well enough to start the game. His 13 points, all scored in the first half, garnered him high-scoring honors for the Wildcats.

Lipscomb Leads Vandy

After Brewer's removal from the fray, the Commodores, with Pinky Lipscomb leading the way with a brilliant scoring spree, pulled to within two points of the Wildcats, 27-25, at halftime.

After the second half got underway, the Vandy surge continued, and after eight minutes of the period had elapsed, the Tennesseeans had run the count to 38-32 in their favor.

At this point, Eral Allen took matters into his hands, and scoring from all angles helped the Cats to knot the count at 46-46. The Cats then forged back into the lead when Allen sank a long shot and Farnsley added a tip-in. Thweat and Davis sank crisp for the Vandy before the fray ended, but Farnsley sandwiched a free toss in between them to give the Cats their one-point advantage. Lipscomb was high scorer for the night with 21 points. Although Mel Brewer was the spectacular scoring anties of Allen during the Cats' last half rally that stole the show from the Kentucky standpoint.

WOOD TURNINGS ARE EXHIBITED Prestini Works Shown In Library

Usual wood turnings, created on a lathe by James L. Prestini, Lake Forest, Ill., director of the crafts department of the Lake Forest Academy, are now on display in the University art department galleries.

Ranging in color from light mahog to dark walnuts and mahoganes, some of the works of art, which include trays, bowls, plates, bracelets, salad sets, tables, and lamps, have been turned to an amazing fragility, according to Prof. C. R. Barnhart, head of the art department.

Rarity Explained

Professor Barnhart explained that the works on display are unusual because most of the art in lathe work today is seen only in table legs or larger pieces of furniture, and that the simplicity of the pieces on display enhances the fine grains of the woods.

An exhibit of linoleum prints made by first-year students have been arranged on the walls of the gallery by members of the art department.

The exhibit, which will remain up until February 5, will be open to the public daily from 9 a. m. to 12 noon, 1 p. m. to 5 p. m. and from 7 p. m. until 9 p. m.

'Bugs' Classified By UK Experts

So far as the salmonella group is concerned, those minute, microscopic organisms, called "bugs" by the layman, hold no mystery to three University pathologists, Drs. P.R. Edwards, D.W. Bruner, and W. W. Dimock.

To these three scientists, no salmonella "bug" is too tiny, or so complex that it can not be identified and classified according to its respective culture group. During the past two or three years, these probes have studied millions of bacteria, and have become so adept at distinguishing them that they are recognized authorities in the field.

The salmonella, or paratyphoid, group of bacteria is the cause of a disease which results in a large fatality in livestock. The disease is similar to ptomaine poisoning in the human being.

Being a national Salmonella center, the local pathologists' small laboratory on the experiment station farm receives for diagnosis an annual average of 600 to 700 cultures from all over the nation. Although it is usually not difficult to classify the bacteria, Doctor Edwards said that occasionally a culture is received that cannot be identified with any of the existing classes; therefore a new class must be created. The local department of pathology has been designated as a national Salmonella center by the international center at the State Serum Institute, Copenhagen, Denmark. There are only two other centers in the United States, one in Albany, N.Y. and the other in New York city.

Recreation Meet Will Be Repeated

So successful was the Recreation Institute held on the campus last week that participants expressed a desire to have a similar short course next year. Prof. M. E. Potter, head of the physical education department and supervisor of the institute, said yesterday.

Recreation supervisors and workers from all over the state attended the six-day meeting, which was held under the auspices of the state WPA recreation division and the University physical education department.
